Federal Communications Commission

Dear FCC,

I have concerns that taking ISPs out of Title II will open the public up to having their streams and searches throttled. My family is full of small business owners. My father is a self-employed commercial driver and my uncle is a farmer. Both rely more on the internet for marketing opportunities. Title II protects them from being asked someday to pay money beyond internet access to promote their businesses. Please consider the consequences that could occur to small business when they are not protected from exploitation of large corporations.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Murray E. Beachtel". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style with a large initial 'M'.
